As the jobless rate settles at 15 percent in the region, it is more important than ever to mobilize the resources that will help meet the needs of those most affected by the economy. Preserving jobs, linking residents to available jobs and providing training for current and future employment opportunities is a top priority of the San Bernardino County's Board of Supervisors and Workforce Investment Board.

On March 25, a free countywide job fair will be held to connect local job seekers with employers looking to recruit employees for more than 600 positions.

Job seekers will have the opportunity to meet and interview with employers that have an immediate need to hire. More than 40 employers will be in attendance representing a variety of occupational fields, including retail, service, sales, health care, education, law enforcement, clerical, security, labor, technical, industrial and government.

Here are some of the employment opportunities that are expected to be available:

- Vali Cooper & Associates, Inc. hiring inspectors and resident and office engineers
- ChildCare Careers, LLC recruiting 10 full-time and part-time teachers and assistant teachers
- Securitas Security Services looking to hire 20 private security guards
- Walmart recruiting for logistics positions
- IDS USA looking to hire 20 general labor workers
- Goodwill Industries International, Inc. recruiting 15 to 25 people for management, clerical, retail and service positions

From 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., attendees will be able to walk from table to table to learn more about each employer's workforce needs. Job seekers are encouraged to dress professionally and come prepared with resumes.

Through job fairs and other employment events, the Workforce Investment Board is helping unemployed residents successfully re-enter the workforce. Additional resources can be accessed at the county's three Employment Resource Centers, which provide a range of free or low-cost services including job search, job placement, job career counseling, resume writing, skills assessment and interview training. Free access to computers, printers, faxes, telephones and copy machines are also available.
